Kentucky Community Action Commission's Pendleton County Neighborhood Center helps low-income families achieve self-reliance through a range of services and programs. The developmental services help families gain skills, abilities and motivation to become economically independent. The supportive services provide basic, temporary assistance to give families greater comfort, safety, dignity and security as they transition out of poverty.

The Pendleton County Neighborhood Center administers several energy assistance programs during the winter months; distributes USDA food for families and seniors; distributes temporary financial assistance as funds permit; takes applications for agency Weatherization services; helps working families obtain state-funded child care services and provides case management to homeless families and individuals needing community service hours or other work activities.

Donations including financial, food, clothing and volunteer support are needed and appreciated. Contact the Neighborhood Center for more details, or visit the agency website: www.nkccac.org.
